At the loyalist meeting held in the Protestant Hall last evening, resolutions were passed protesting against the mission of the Irish delegates; expressed their sympathy with the Government, and

It may be conceded that the conduct of the responsible members of the Opposition has thus far been characterised in the main by a seemingly observance of the proprieties of debate. We have not had, this session, any of those exhibitions of flagrant misconduct by which some previous Assemblies have won discredit and notoriety. There have not been any of those scenes of verbal violence within the Chamber, or of physical violence just outside its four walls, by which representative institutions in the colony have on some former occasions been disgraced. In marked contrast with these things, we have had professions of sweet reasonableness; and it cannot be said that they have been altogether falsified in practice. To a large extent, perhaps, as a rule, the language of criticism, and even of censure, has exhibited moderation and restraint. To those who have formed a fair estimate of what is possible when the curb is not applied—to those who had speculated amidst the heat of the late crisis upon the probabilities of the case—the pleasing phenomena to which, in all candour and sincerity, attention is here directed, have been a source of pleasurable relief.

At the same time it must be recorded by the truthful historian that the proceedings of Parliament have not been of a satisfactory kind. So much will probably be acknowledged by the more thoughtful and public-spirited members of the Opposition itself. It is not to be assumed that feelings of patriotism are entertained only on one side of the House. Opposition members as well as Ministerial members proclaim their desire for the good of the country; and the chances are that there are men on the left of the Speaker as well as on his right, who, when their minds are more or less free from the disturbing influence of party feeling, recognise the fact that the good of the country cannot be promoted by proceedings which reduce the Legislature to a halfparalysed condition. There were some indications of that a few nights ago, when the Government received the avowed support of several of the more responsible members of the Opposition. But, notwithstanding these indications, it seems difficult to believe that on that side of the House there is a generally clear perception of the position in which Parliament and the business of the country now are, or of the whirlpools of confusion, and perhaps disaster, towards which they are drifting. On the other side there have been admissions of the urgent need for an Amending Land Bill. It is well known that unless certain changes in the law are shortly made the more lapse of time will soon bring some of the provisions of the Bill into operation, with of the Act of 1894 also, and the effects injurious alike to public and private interests. In recognition of the emergency, it has been said repeatedly that the Opposition would not deal with the Land Bill as a party measure or in a party spirit.

But what are the prospects of the Land Bill at this moment? By an unfortunate accident the MINISTER for LANDS was rendered physically incapable of moving the second reading on the intended day. Much sympathy was expressed when the facts were made known. Sympathy with the Minister could not curtail the delay in the progress of the bill; but as the unexpected delay made the case more urgent than before, the greater reason was found for expediting that progress after the delay had passed. Mr. HUGHES was well position would be served by accepting the responsibility of talking the bill out of existence. The country would also probably like to be satisfied as to the views and intentions of the Government in this matter. On the day of April, the PREMIER, when making a first Ministerial statement, said he hoped that the session might be closed in about six weeks from that time, that the Budget Bill might be passed in six or eight days, and that the session proper to the year must be opened before the close of June. State-mentaries like those could only be accepted at a heavy discount. But, making all allowances for the influence of an over-sanguine spirit, what is the explanation of the

England about it is tossed with ragged from within and without.
France had it for a space in the of RICHIELEU, and England and it often when nearly every State in Europe was convulsed. England's insu-rity has saved her to some extent from the overflow of that special kind of revolutionary agitation that passes from one to the other of the countries of Europe her social troubles spring chiefly from Ireland. In the frozen North also, in Norway and Sweden, and Denmark, the fever of revolt against existing conditions does not run high. We can trace the cause of Italy's comparative peace. The terrible strife as preceded her unification so exhausted

Socialism as now. The army, the police, the public service are eaten through by corruption, and the people, through with them, are quite ready to believe that the Nihilists will carry out the threat spoken by one of their number on the scaffold "We will sacrifice the White Czar yet." This is a stage of transition. With the spread of free communication between nations, the interchange of national opinion, the dissemination of literature, and the education of the masses, there is born a power which respects not things monarchical or the country that aspires to thereto, the great expenditure that it necessarily entails, and the impractical nature of the office of the monarch, particularly when he is but the figure head of a democracy.

of "loyalist" agitation, and if we are judge at all by the numbers that attended, there is no fear for the loyalty of the people. Resolutions were passed expressing antagonism to the mission of the propagators and sympathy with the English Government. As was quite natural, Mr. P. A. DOSTOVA, and all who sided with it, came in for unparading castigation. It is not surprising. When people feel strongly they are not always reserved in expression of their feeling, and we were quite prepared to see Lord SALISBURY made a saint by the one side and a demon by the other. If it is really a matter of loyalty that is to be considered, we are as far as the most ardent maker at last night's meeting, but is the destruction of the vines, and branch, especially the root, which the insect feeds, but in several live roots were found, in one instance more than 12 inches from the surface. In the latter case the vines had been "destroyed" eight years ago, and the Phylloxera was found last year. It seems now are disappeared, but the fact is very certain. On the other hand, it seems placed beyond doubt, from investigation made in the district, that when vines are absolutely destroyed the Phylloxera ceases to exist. We gather from reports, not that the "destruction" plan will, but that the Victorian authorities have been playing with the question. Discoveries that were made, we are told, that the Government have ample powers to act, without a special bill, sufficient lead to the street any way that may be determined but in order to make themselves perfectly and to avoid the necessity of a special bill as against them he advises that a motion bill should be passed by Parliament. The rest of the sub-committee, consisting of the Minister-General, the Colonial Treasurer, and the Minister for Works, to whom the matter was referred, the Cabinet, will be held to-morrow, for the purpose of considering the recommendations to be submitted to their colleagues in the Executive Council.

The Minister for Mines paid a visit yesterday, in company with the Chief Inspector of Stock and the Chief Veterinary Officer, to the quarantine stations of the Head and Shark Island. The principal object of the visit was to inspect the state of the quarantine grounds, and to examine the buildings,

The Minister also visited Redd Island, where experiments were made in connection with Pasteur's specific for the destruction of rabies, under the direction of the Intercolonial Commission. These experiments are concluded, and it has become a question whether the island shall be utilised for some experiment in connection with pleuro-pneumonia on the seal-wilds as were carried out by the representatives of Mr. Pasteur in Queensland. Both Dr. Macleod and M. Loir have now left the colonies dissatisfied with the treatment they have received at the hands of the Rabbit Commission.

ALBANY, MONDAY.

Some excitement has been occasioned by a man giving the name of William Thompson, who had been from Melbourne on Saturday night. He behaved very strangely in a very eccentric manner, stating he was being pursued by men who sought to kill him. Ultimately the landlord of the hotel sent for the police, who arrested him on a charge of lunacy. They found over £100 on him, besides a revolver and ammunition. The man was brought before the Bench to-day, and sent to goal for medical treatment. He is believed to be suffering from delirium tremens.

Satisfactory evidence of the general prosperity of the farmers is afforded by the fact that only five applications for seed wheat were sent to the Government from this district.

Heavy rain set in to-day, and still continues. It is considered likely to interfere seriously with farming operations, and will also injure the pastoral interest, as lambing is now in progress.

BALLINA, MONDAY.

The weather continues very wet.

LANCASHIRE, MONDAY.

Considerable dissatisfaction is expressed among the leading graziers of the district at the long continued delay on the part of the Railway Commissioners in erecting trucking yards at Carcarr. At a recent inspection of the proposed site by two members of the Board of Commissioners, it was decided to write to the Commissioners, if the matter is further delayed, asking for permission for the stock-owners to erect yards at Carcarr themselves.

COBAR, MONDAY.

The Land Board finished its sittings on Saturday, dealing with a large list of cases.

GILGANDRA, MONDAY.

Two middle-aged men, named John McTaggart, dealer, and Jackson, a blacksmith, both well known and respected on the Castlereagh, were brought before the local Bench at a special sitting on Saturday on a charge of sheep-stealing. Taggart was charged with the theft of a sheep, and Jackson with the theft of a sheep. The case was adjourned for trial. A curious feature of the case was that the sheep alleged to have been stolen were wild, and neither of the accused were horsemen. The skins were found in the men's possession, and were sworn to by Mr. Thomas Collier, the owner, who produced the sheep from Mr. Buckland of Wombolite station.

The weather is dull and cold, with appearances of approaching rain.

GRAFTON, MONDAY.

The District Court was opened to-day by Judge Murray.

MURUMBidgee, MONDAY.

The steamer Archer, from Bourke, will arrive to-morrow. The Lady Darling, with a load of timber for Louth, arrived to-day.

It commenced raining here about 3 o'clock this morning, and continued a heavy downpour all day. Two inches have fallen up to the present time (6.20 p.m.). It is now raining heavily. Till 10 p.m. it is expected that the river will have risen two feet since morning.

NEWCASTLE, MONDAY.

Mr. Christopher Irvine, cashier of the Great Northern Railway, was the guest of the family of the Northern Hotel on Saturday night, on the occasion of his retirement to his private residence at Newcastle. The party was given by the Commercial Bank, made the presentation.

During the voyage of the barque Mary Lowe from Liverpool to this port, a sailor named Joseph Johns fell from the rigging into the sea, and was drowned. The vessel is owned by Mr. James Alexander Brown.

A drunken man named Butler struck another man named Harris across the head with a poker, inflicting a nasty wound. The man was brought up to the police court on Saturday morning, and remanded till Tuesday next, owing to Harris being confined to his bed.

The barque Mary Lowe, Captain Robertson, general cargo, arrived from Liverpool direct this morning. The passage was uneventful and occupied 102 days. The vessel is owned by Mr. James Alexander Brown.

The Borough Council appointed a committee to-day to inquire into the matter of the widening of the streets Newcastle by electricity. The Mayor was instructed to interview the Minister for Works on Wednesday, in reference to the Cottage Creek drainage, and the necessary arrangements for the purpose of lighting the dyke and wharfs with electricity, erected at once.

QUIRINDI, MONDAY.

The applications for coal now supplied by the Government have been few. Those farmers who have had their grain burnt, but have not yet received a good deal to their loss from the Government, are disappointed.

During the three weeks he has been in New England he has enrolled 250 members in the Temperance Society. He visited Armidale, Hillgrove, Uralla, Glen Innes, Tingha, Inverell, Romani, and Tenterfield, leaving this morning for Sydney. He has a large list of converts, and is in order being Armidale, Tenterfield, and Inverell.

WAGGA, MONDAY.

On Friday evening a telegram was received from Mr. John King, of Hanging Rock, requesting that a doctor be despatched immediately, as Captain Scott, of Melbourne, was very ill, and was in a very serious condition. It was stated that one arm was shattered.

It has been raining heavily all day; 55 points fell up to 7 o'clock to-night.

WILLACANNIA, MONDAY.

Good rains fell here to-day, 30 points being registered. The weather is still unsettled.
